The 6th Teaching and Learning Conference organised by the University of Zululand (UNIZULU) through the Teaching and Learning Centre is considered a platform where academics, researchers, and practitioners from the rest of the African continent and all over the world share their practices, experience, and research on different areas of interests, and fields such as:

- Teaching and Learning in Higher Education: African realities, insights, and perspectives
- Transformation and Innovations in Teaching and Learning: practices, pedagogies, curriculum development and assessment
- Inclusive Education Systems: diversity, equity, fallacies, and finance
- Reimagining postgraduate studies and supervision models
- Technological advancements in Higher Education
- Citizenship Education: student initiatives and community engagement projects
- Social innovation and entrepreneurship
- Transdisciplinary and sustainable student success
- Internationalisation: trends, challenges and possibilities
- Reimagining Teaching and Learning post – COVID 19

Over the years, universities have experienced changes in how they do things, especially in teaching and learning, research, and community engagement. The changes have necessitated, amongst other things, the reimagining of the higher education landscape, which will not only reflect the new ways in which Universities are tackling their operations but also how they prepare their academics and students for a changing world.

With the above goals in mind, the University of Zululand invites you to its 6th Teaching and Learning Conference to jointly explore and exchange ideas and insights that could grow the Higher Education system in South Africa and beyond.
